Coins with religious legends form an important and rare aspect of the Bengal coinage, particularly the one struck in the relatively short reign of Jalal al-Din Fath Shah. However, the legends as reported in G&G (as above) are far from certain and particularly the last part of the reverse legend leaves more to be said in terms of which words suit the letterforms best. But it is certain that the legends refer to 'Qadam-i Rasool', or the footprint of the Prophet, with the Sultan naming himself as the Mujawar (close companion or servant) of the shrine.
A belief started early in Islam was that when Prophet Muhammad stepped on a rock, his footprint left an imprint. Orthodox brands of Islam did not accept this belief but the idea was disseminated widely and led to the creation of many shrines around such imprints. Contextually, the practice matches 'footprint worship' in pre-Islamic beliefs such as Buddhism and Vaishnavism. Particularly in the realms of the Sultans of Bengal, such shrines were created by various Sultans at Pandua (Firuzabad), Gaur, Cuttack, Nabiganj and Chittagong (both in Bangladesh). Of these, the one from Pandua dates from the reign of Fath Shah and it is said that the footprint it venerates came from the meditation room (Chilla Khana) of the Sufi establishment of Shaykh Jalal Tabrezi. This Sufi Shaykh played an important role in disseminating of Islam in the Western part of Bengal, and along with Nur Qutb ul-'Alam, he is considered to be a highly regarded Muslim saint. The fact that Fath Shah regards him as a 'servant' and a 'Shaykh' at this shrine is particularly significant because it highlights the Sultan's piety and leaning towards a more non-orthodox version of Islam. The coins with these legends were struck from many mints but they all are very rare. Coins bearing the mint-name 'Khazana', like this one, are known in wide flans and with decorative borders enclosing the legends, so were very likely produced specially, possibly at the inauguration of the shrine in 1485.

Vellore was an important stronghold in the upper Cauvery-Penneru doaba. It was captured in 1676 by the armies of Chhatrapati Shivaji Maharaj on his famous 'Southern conquest' expeditions. The obverse design of the coin suggests a direct connect with the Adilshahis, under whose control it lay in c.1665-1676 and it is likely that it was struck during the reign of Ali Adil Shah II (1656-1672), by a local feudatory official.

Nagpur Bhonslas

- 172 Silver Square Nazarana Rupee, 11.45g, Katak Mint, in the name of Shah Alam II, RY 5 (Not listed in major Publication). Extremely fine, exceedingly rare.

A highly unusual and rare square coin of Cuttack mint, under the Bhonsla rule. Similar round rupees were listed by P.P. Kulkarni ('Coinage of the Bhonsla Rajas of Nagpur', p. 135, Type 19). The calligraphy of the coins bears a striking similarity to the East India Company's coins of Murshidabad / Calcutta mints. It is not certain who was behind their issue; if the mint-name is 'real', the Bhonslas remain the best contenders but if it is a pseudo-mint name, i.e. the coins are struck at a place further North into the British realms they could well be East India Company issues. However, more proof is needed to substantiate this position. It is possible that this coin is a specially struck ("Nazarana") issue. One more coin, with RY 22, of this shape exists in the American Numismatic Society's collection.

- 355 Silver Rupee, 10.77g, Transitional coinage, Saugor (Sagar) Mint, struck in the name of Shah Alam II, fixed RY 55, with the name 'Saugor' inscribed in English on obverse and the date 1819 in English numbers on reverse. First ever appeared in any Auction House. Extremely fine, exceedingly rare.

This coin is an exceedingly rare type introduced as a short-lived transitional type soon after Central India was consolidated under British rule after the fall of the Marathas (Sindhia and Holkar in this case). The rupees produced at Sagar (Saugor) at this time were Maratha 'Balashahi' rupees but they were quickly imitated by an unofficial mint at Garhakota, producing coins of an inferior standard and thereby causing a lot of confusion in the market. To remedy this, Mr Maddock, the Assistant to the Agent to Governor General, ordered the coinage produced at Saugor to have features such as the name inscribed on them in English and also the date in English numerals, so that they could be easily distinguished from the unofficial, debased copies being produced at Garhakota. Maddock also suggested that the mint be run on a government payroll in order to increase efficiency and production and his suggestion was implemented in 1825.
