Cowries or Kodis are the earliest natural objects used as a part of barter exchange. The use of cowries started even before 1000 BC but it remained in circulation in early historic period also. Since natural cowries were subject to wear and tear, such broken Cowries were not accepted as money in local markets. To overcome this difficulty, in early historic period around 600 BC, Cowries were made in metals, like copper. Such metal cowries had a long life and remained in circulation for hundreds of years. These three Copper Cowries were found along with Surashtra Janapada Punch-marked coins in Junagadh District of Gujarat. This association of Cowries along with Punch-marked coins indicate that the cowries remained at par with coined money in 4th century also. An important piece of historical linkage between coins and primitive money. Set of 3 Copper Cowries of three different weights.
